Hip-hop yoga has Philly moms flexing to Tupac

Flexible. Diamond Hot Yoga lets practitioners strike poses to Tupac, Jay Z, Drake and Lauryn Hill.

A hip-hop yoga class at Diamond Hot Yoga in North Philadelphia. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER

Warrior and downward-facing dog poses sync perfectly with the beats of Tupac Shakur at Diamond Hot Yoga, a North Philly studio in the shadow of Temple's campus.

They hold a vinyasa class on Sunday afternoons, set to the likes of Rakim, Jay Z and Lauryn Hill. The instructor, Jazmyn Burton, also plays newer folks, like Drake, and even takes requests.

Hip-hop yoga is just one piece of Diamond Hot Yoga's outside-the-box programming. Once a month, for example, they throw Rock Ya Chakra, a Bikram class with a rock soundtrack that ends with complimentary PBRs.

At the end of the summer, they'll be hosting two body-positive yoga workshops. The hip-hop yoga class has run the longest out of the unusual workshops; the class has been going on for about six months.

"I didn't want to disrespect the culture of yoga with the music, but I find that there are a lot of parables and spiritual messages in hip-hop, even some of the grimiest hip-hop," Burton said. "I feel like there's an undertone of positivity in a lot of our music that does match with the spiritual lineage of yoga."

Quoted

"Torture chamber, kill yourself – these are things that everybody hears [about Bikram]. But it's fun, and it's fun if you take away that whole [attitude]: You're not coming here to suffer, you're coming here to do something for yourself."

Coluzzi

That might be hard for yogis to swallow, but warming up against Kendrick Lamar's "Alright" quelled any doubts I had when I tried a hip-hop class.

The track isn't a flowery, super mellow number; the beat is a driving one, and the message is deeply encouraging. Burton's classes tap into yoga's vibes and rhythms. She's dubbed it "Hustle and Flow."

Diamond Hot Yoga owner Jen Coluzzi said the studio's programming prods people to think a little differently about certain yoga traditions.

"Torture chamber, kill yourself — these are things that everybody hears [about Bikram]," she said. "But it's fun, and it's fun if you take away that whole [attitude]: You're not coming here to suffer, you're coming here to do something for yourself."

This past Sunday, the studio replaced their normal hip-hop class with a hip-hop mala, an event to commemorate the summer solstice through 108 sequences with meditation sessions commingled throughout. The repeated sequences were sun salutations, a cycle of poses that trace back to honoring the sun god.

Traditionally, Burton explained to the class, yogis throw stones to help with the counting, but we would use pennies. The number 108 is sacred in Hinduism, Buddhism and yoga culture. (Diamond Hot Yoga is located on 1000 Diamond Street, Suite 108.)

It wasn't as exhausting as it might sound. Doing it to "Drop It Low" though? That was as cool as you might imagine.

Beware. Dangerous jellyfish fears at Jersey Shore beach

The rare Portuguese man o' war sighting has lifeguards on alert. / HARVEY CEDARS BEACH PATROL

A jellyfish known for its painful stings washed up on a Jersey Shore beach on Sunday, prompting lifeguards to warn swimmers to be extra careful.

Lifeguards spotted the Portuguese man o' war jellyfish on Sunday on Long Beach Island, off the Jersey coast, prompting the Harvey Cedars Beach Patrol to post on Facebook on June 21.

"This morning we found a Portuguese man o' war washed up on the beach," the patrol posted.

"When the wind is coming from the northeast, warm water from the Gulf Stream comes to shore.

With the warm water, often comes seaweed and critters from down south."

Also known as the "floating terror" or "bluebottle," a man o' war's sting is said to be far more painful than that of a regular jellyfish.

The man o' war has venomous tentacles that can grow to be as long as 30 feet, which it uses to paralyze and trap ocean prey.

They can cause extreme pain in humans. Depending on the person, a man o' war's stings can cause extreme pain, fever, shock, lung and heart problems and in rare cases, death.

A British beach was closed in 2008 after 10 man o' wars were found in the area.

While man o' wars are rarer finds on East Coast U.S. beaches, they are known to sting more than 10,000 swimmers in Australia every summer.

Pizzeria Beddia

Fishtown pizza joint dubbed best in the US

Where will you find the best pizza in the United States?

Philadelphia — that part is obvious. But more specifically, Pizzeria Beddia, according to a nationally renowned food magazine.

A Fishtown masterpiece
PIZZERIA BEDDIA

On Tuesday. Bon Appetit pronounced the Fishtown pizzeria the best in the nation, shocking pizza observers nationwide, in an article titled "This Is the Best Pizza in America (Yep, We Said It)."

Food critic Andrew Knowlton calls pizza chef and Zavino alum Joe Beddia a "pizza saint."

"Beddia's pizza isn't one of those precious pies with a bit of mozzarella and a few basil leaves," Knowlton gushes. "It's the execution and the repetition that really hook me. It's the always-crispy-chewy crust. It's the invariably perfect ratio of sauce to cheese to toppings. Every time I get to eat it, I consider myself the luckiest person on the planet." SAM NEWHOUSE

Cops in video of beating were 'doing their jobs'

Officer Kevin Robinson and Officer Sean McKnight / FILE

Najee Rivera

Scooter beatdown. Prosecutors contend officers lied in reports.

Lawyers for two Philly cops accused of knocking a man off of his scooter, savagely beating him and then lying about it said the surveillance video that prompted charges against them shows nothing more than two cops doing their job.

That video, however, was enough to hold the men for trial.

Officers Sean McKnight and Kevin Robinson will face trial on charges of aggravated assault, conspiracy, filing false reports and tampering with public records, Common Pleas Court Judge Theresa Carr Deni ruled after a two-hour preliminary hearing Tuesday.

McKnight and Robinson attempted to pull over Najee Rivera around 5th and Somerset on May 2013. Rivera fled — he says because the officers exited their patrol vehicles with their nightsticks out and he was afraid of being beaten.

Video, played in the courtroom, showed the officers catching up with Rivera on 6th Street — where both Rivera and the officers are driving the wrong way down a one-way street.

Defense attorneys argue that Rivera merely fell.

"What I saw in the video was the end of a fight from police where police officers took somebody into custody who refused to show his hands, and they had to use force in order to get him to show his hands," said defense attorney Brian McMonagle

Taking the stand Tuesday, Rivera said he remembers little about it.

"All I know about being on the ground is I was bleeding a lot," Rivera said. "I was there but not there."

Boyfriend charged with murdering mother of three

The boyfriend of a mother of three — who'd previously been jailed for assaulting her — has been arrested for her gruesome murder last week.

Gerrell Hall, 28, was charged with the murder of his long-time girlfriend Brittany Lange Green, 28, who died after being stabbed repeatedly in the throat on June 17 inside her home.

Green was found inside her residence on the 4900 block after officers responded to a call for a person screaming at 7:15 a.m.

Wife hunts beloved wedding dress lost by laundromat

Gone. She says she never got it back.

How far would you go to get your wedding dress back?

South Philadelphia resident Levana Layendecker is putting out the call on social media to enlist the public's aid in finding the beloved wedding dress lost while being cleaned by Wash Cycle Laundry a few weeks ago.

Layendecker wrote a detailed post on her blog about her frustrations dealing with Wash Cycle Laundry, claiming she was "wooed" into using the service, which offers laundry pickup via bicycles that are often seen traveling around Philadelphia, for the first time.

But days after they picked up her laundry bag with clothes including the wedding dress, on June 3, she was told it had been lost.

Levana Layendecker's dress / LEVANA LAYENDECKER

"I spent the next week following up with them every day and begging them to let me come to facility and look for it myself," Layendecker wrote. "They refused and on June 8, over the phone, they offered to pay me $350 for my items. I refused and asked to speak to a supervisor."

Wash Cycle's marketing director Leigh Goldenberg confirmed Layendecker's complaint was filed, but says the company has been "sleepless" in the past days while searching for the dress.

"What we are here to do is clean laundry and deliver it back to people. We came up short," Goldenberg said.

"We have a procedure for missing items, which we went above and beyond at her request and because of the sentimental nature of the item."

The search included reviewing security footage, revisiting all delivery points from the day Layendecker's items were picked up, and searching through Wash Cycle's five Philadelphia locations. Goldenberg estimated that various staff members invested about 40 hours into searching for the dress before concluding it was irretrievably lost.

"We did everything we could do to try and recover the dress. When we determined that was not possible we took the step of cutting her the check," Goldenberg said. "We understand that no amount of money would make up for the fundamental loss."

Goldenberg said that based on their records,

Quoted

"What we are here to do is clean laundry and deliver it back to people. We came up short."

Wash Cycle's Leigh Goldenberg

Wash Cycle estimates that one item out of every 4,000 pickups is lost and not found.

Layendecker was sent a refund check for $300, she said in her blog post.

She believes the dress was accidentally delivered to another Wash Cycle customer. Now she is spreading the pictures of the dress on Twitter and Facebook to hopefully catch the eye of the person who received it.

Amazon to join other retailers in banning flag

Amazon.com became the latest big retailer to decide to pull Confederate flag merchandise from its website, a source told Reuters, just hours after eBay said it would take similar action.

Wal-Mart and Sears on Monday said they would prohibit the sale of Confederate flags and related merchandise in stores and websites.

A search on Amazon's website on Tuesday found thousands of Confederate flags and merchandise such as T-shirts and knives bearing the flag's image.

A search on online auction site eBay's website on Tuesday found thousands of Confederate flags and merchandise including clothing and smartphone cases bearing the flag's image on its marketplace.

South Carolina lawmakers vote to open Confederate flag debate

Civil rights groups. The rally was held in the state capital of Columbia, about 120 miles from Charleston.

South Carolina lawmakers voted to open debate on Tuesday on removing the Confederate flag from the State House grounds in the aftermath of last week's massacre of nine African-Americans at a historic Charlestown church.

Both chambers of the legislature voted overwhelmingly to take up the issue as hundreds of people, chanting "Take it down," rallied outside the capitol building in Columbia, about 120 miles from Wednesday's shooting. The Senate will consider a similar measure.

The Civil War-era flag of the pro-slavery Confederacy has become a lightning rod for outrage over the attack and the racist motives that apparently lay behind the shooting.

"Cultures and generations change. No one should have any association with something that is used as an excuse to take nine lives just because of different skin color," said Vincent Sheheen, a Democrat who has served in the South Carolina Senate for more than three decades.

Federal authorities are investigating the massacre at Charleston's Emanuel African Methodist Episcopal Church as a hate crime. The accused gunman, a 21-year-old white man now charged with nine counts of murder, had posed with a Confederate flag in photos posted online with a racist manifesto.

One of the most prominent U.S. flag makers, Valley Forge Flag, said on Tuesday it would stop manufacturing and selling Confederate flags.

Opponents of flying the flag on the State House grounds consider it an emblem of slavery that has become a symbol for racism and xenophobia in the United States.

REUTERS

Quoted

"We hope that this decision will show our support for those affected by the recent events in Charleston and, in some small way, help to foster racial unity and tolerance in our country."

Valley Forge Flag, the Pennsylvania-based company, said in a statement.

1 Searchers comb resort after two tornados hit Illinois

Searchers with rescue dogs combed through a large lake resort west of Chicago on Tuesday, looking for people who might be trapped after a tornado toppled trailers and recreational vehicles, state officials said.

On Monday night, a tornado tore through Woodhaven Lakes campground in Lee County, a two-hour drive from Chicago, Governor Bruce Rauner's office said in a statement.

Another tornado then hit the village of Coal City 55 miles away, injuring a handful of people and damaging some 30 homes and businesses, officials said.

The Woodhaven Lakes campground, near the town of Sublette, has more than 6,000 sites but many were unoccupied on Monday evening, according to a nearby business owner.

"We're very fortunate that it wasn't on a weekend or a big holiday," said Cynthia McCoy, who owns a nearby restaurant. REUTERS

Confederate statues at University of Texas hit by critics, vandals

Statues of three Confederate leaders standing for decades at the University of Texas were vandalized with red paint amid fresh calls this week for their removal, university officials said.

The statues at the often left-leaning university in Austin, a liberal city in conservative Texas, have gained new attention due to the debate in South Carolina about taking down the Confederate battle flag from the state's capitol building, a week after a white gunman allegedly shot dead nine black worshipers at a historic church. Branson says Virgin Cruises will sail out of Miami in 2020

Richard Branson's Virgin Cruises will take delivery of three ships capable of carrying nearly 3,000 passengers each starting in early 2020.

"It's no secret I've dreamed of building a cruise line for a very long time," said Branson, 64.

The first ship will operate out of Miami, but no decision was announced about the other two.

Branson arrived at the news conference by helicopter and posed for pictures sporting a cherry red captain's hat, flanked by two models. REUTERS

Brewmaster whose toxic 'moonshine' killed 102 arrested

Tragedy in Mumbai.
Slum dwellers die drinking toxic booze.

One of the main suppliers of a toxic alcoholic brew that killed 102 people and sickened 40 others in the slums of Mumbai has been arrested.

Deputy Commissioner of Police Dhananjay Kulkarni identified the primary bootlegger as Mansur Latif Shaikh, according to a One India report.

"The government has ordered a probe under the Chief Secretary to enquire into the deaths caused in the unfortunate Malwani hooch tragedy and submit the report within three months," a government spokesman said.

The government is also considering harsher laws to deal with illegal booze sellers.

Dozens of others are also now in trouble, reports ZeeNews: Eight cops and four other tax investigators have been suspended for suspected negligence, and 20 others are in custody, including two women bootleggers and street runners.

Homemade liquor, often using poisonous industrial methanol, is popular among the poor in India because it is cheap, Reuters reports. JOHN A. OSWALD

Meryl Streep. She joins fight to bring back the Equal Rights Amendment

Every member of Congress is getting Meryl Streep's autograph today. The Oscar-winning actress has taken up the cause of lobbying all members of the U.S. Congress on behalf of the ERA Coalition to resume the push to add the Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution. Today, Streep sent five hundred thirty-five personally signed letters to Washington urging legislators to support the effort.

"I am writing to ask you to stand up for equality — for your mother, your daughter, your sister, your wife or yourself — by actively supporting the Equal Rights Amendment," Streep writes. She also sent lawmakers copies of ERA Coalition founder Jessica Neuwirth's book "Equal Means Equal: Why the Time for the ERA is Now."

Streep is just one of many prominent celebrities and public figures voicing support for the campaign. Others on board include Rashida Jones, Jane Fonda, Tavis Smiley, Taylor Schilling, Lily Tomlin, Gloria Steinem and former President Jimmy Carter. "I am adding my voice to the long-term efforts of others in the campaign to have the rights of the majority of Americans, who were not considered equal citizens by the framers of the Constitution, included and secured by virtue of an Amendment," Streep writes.

The Equal Rights Amendment was first passed by Congress in 1972 but fell three states short of the necessary 38 for ratification before the 1982 deadline to make it a part of the Constitution. Neuwirth founded the ERA Coalition last year to re-launch the effort to make the amendment a reality.

What to do about your student loans if you lose your job

Debt. Keep your finances on track by following these three steps.

Getting laid off doesn't mean you'll automatically default on your student loans. Plenty of services are designed to help. / ISTOCK

When Jesse Lambert lost his job last December, he was about a level seven for panic. After paying rent, the 33-year-old's student loans for his undergraduate degree and masters in international commerce were the next biggest expense at around $450 per month.

Lambert's first step was the one experts advise: He called his lender. After that, his panic quickly subsided. With a game plan in place, the odds were actually in his favor for a short-lived unemployment.

"Having a college degree is a good hedge against unemployment," says student loan expert Mark Kantrowitz, who publishes the education resource site Edvisors Network. The following are steps experts advise taking if you are out of work for a few months while paying off student loans.

Call your lender

The default rate for student loans, which total over $1 trillion, was 12.9 percent for public colleges in 2014. In addition to ruining your credit, one reason you do not want to hide from lenders is that they may be able to help.

Federal loans come with set options for deferments, with all payments suspended for a time. There is also the option of forbearance, allowing you to delay payments, although interest will still accrue and be tacked back onto the loan. Deferments are a better choice because they do not add on to the total loan balance, Kantrowitz notes.

Private lenders will also offer these options, and some will go further to come up with alternative payment plans. Wells Fargo, for instance, has a team trained to craft specific solutions for borrowers after listening extensively to their circumstances, says John Rasmussen, Wells Fargo's head of Education Financial Services.

Rally your network

When Lambert ramped up his job search last winter, he even got help networking from his lender, SoFi, a startup that has handled $2.5 billion in loans since launching in 2013. When he refinanced his loans, he remembered seeing something about career services. After calling SoFi about deferment options, he ended up getting personalized job search coaching.

Lean on your emergency funds

Because your job search is likely to be short, the best way to get through it is to have an emergency fund, advises Jenny Smith, financial services representative for the Principal Financial Group.

Borrowers in financial trouble should avoid expensive options like consolidation, because it will probably result in an higher overall interest rate, Smith says. Nor should they take on credit card debt in order to pay off student loans. "Band-aiding can be bigger problem later," she says.

If your lender does not offer career services, look to your state government or local chamber of commerce for programs aimed at young professionals. REUTERS

Why it sucks to be Diddy's kid

GETTY IMAGES

So Sean Combs is facing multiple felony assault charges — and, for some reason, a charge of "making terrorist threats" — and UCLA coaching staff member Sal Alosi nearly had his head bashed in with a kettleball, but you know who you should really feel bad for in all of this? Combs' son, Justin Dior Combs. First of all, his middle name is Dior. Thanks, Dad. And second, it's hilariously coming to light that Diddy is a "helicopter dad" when it comes to his son's football career, regularly attending practice, stalking the sidelines and butting in where his opinion is not necessarily needed or wanted. That's barely acceptable — and superannoying — at pee-wee soccer games or high school athletics, but this is college football we're talking about. How embarrassing it must be for poor Justin Dior Combs.

Also, I imagine Diddy's helicopter parenting nonsense at practices sounds a lot like his producing work on his old hip-hop tracks, with him just interjecting a random "yeah" or "uh huh" here or there, then giving himself a "featuring" credit. Bad Boy for life, yo.

Marky Mark, honorary New Kid

New Kids On The Block selling out Madison Square Garden. Janet Jackson releasing a new song. What year is this again? The boy band (can we call them a man band at this point?) sold out MSG two nights in a row, giving fans the ultimate throwback experience by having the two surviving members of TLC take the stage before they went on. T-Boz and Chilli performed three songs, ending with "No Scrubs," which had the whole stadium singing along. And Monday night, Mark Wahlberg joined the guys on stage, the first time he's done so in more than 20 years. Then, as if that wasn't enough, rapper 50 Cent made a surprise appearance and everyone launched into "Just A Friend," followed by "In Da Club." We'd say the fans got their money's worth, wouldn't you?

Tylenol is selling equality now?

This new Tylenol ad is sweet and heartwarming and moving, but also kind of a headscratcher. The headache reliever enlisted Oscar winners Dustin Lance Black and Susan Sarandon to direct and narrate, respectively, a tribute to families in their many shapes and sizes and permutations. Which is great and full of warm fuzzies and all, but what's their endgame here? It's still, you know, a commercial. Is the hope that the next time you're at CVS you'll reach past Aleve because you can't be sure how that brand really feels about marriage equality?

Today in superadorable news, Calvin Harris is reportedly cat-sitting for girlfriend Taylor Swift while she's out on the road with her world tour. Not only that, but he's even posting videos of her cat on Instagram. This guy, am I right? I have a theory, though: Harris knows the risks in dating Swift, like how likely he is to be the subject of a song — or, who knows, an entire album — should things go bad. He's clearly going out of his way to counteract such a fate. And in the process, he's making life hell for every other boyfriend out there who will be compared to him. Thanks a lot, jerk.

Michelle Obama is the queen of surprise baby showers

Give it up for our troops who are expecting. Michelle Obama recently visited a group of military moms-to-be who thought they were just in for a photo op, but the First Lady had other plans. Joining forces with nonprofits Operation Shower and Glam4Good, Obama and beauty expert Mary Alice Stephenson surprised the group with a lavish baby shower and complimentary shopping spree at the Caserma Ederle U.S. military base in Italy. This sure beats the standard shower staple of playing that chocolate in a diaper game.

Kate Winslet can't garden

In "A Little Chaos," on VOD starting Friday, Kate Winslet plays a woman tasked with designing a garden for Louis XIV. / FOCUS FEATURES

Interview. The star of "A Little Chaos" reveals how she chills out her fellow actors.

Believe it or not, "A Little Chaos" is Kate Winslet's first full-blown costume drama in over a decade. Her last film involving corsets and puffy dresses was "Finding Neverland," in 2004. "I was excited to do that period," she says. "It's like, 'Oh, back to basics. I remember what this feels like!' Then after a day I was like, 'Oh god, I remember what this feels like.'" In the film she plays Sabine de Barra, a woman (alas, fictional) commissioned to design a garden at Versailles for Louis XIV (Alan Rickman, who also directed).

On her gardening skills:

"Oh, I don't have any. So I'll be happy to talk about my gardening talents, which don't really exist, truth be told. I'm just not very good at it. I love gardens, and I'd love to be a gardener. Every year, I say I'm going to learn French and I'm going to learn to garden properly. And then the next year comes around and I say, 'Right, this year I'm going to learn French and learn how to garden properly.' I can sit here and say, 'This year, I'm going to learn.' And I'll just keep on not doing it."

On telling director Alan Rickman she was pregnant:

"I told him the second day of filming. I thought, get the first day out of the way, because it was so stressed. I was nervous to tell him because, even though I knew he'd be really excited, at the same time I knew he'd be like, 'Oh, f—.' I called him into the trailer and I said, 'I really don't know how to say this, so I'm just going to say it really quickly: I'm pregnant.' He went [lowers head], 'Right.' I said, "But look, it's completely fine, I'm completely with it, we just have to carry on. You might just have to accept that my boobs are going to get massive.' And he was like, 'I think I can cope with that.' [Laughs]

On relaxing fellow actors on set:

"I used to have a trick when I was a smoker: I used to sit down and pull out my roll-up cigarettes, which was my quirky thing I used to do. Then I would visibly see people go [sighs], and they'd relax and say, 'Oh, she's normal.' And one by one they'd say, "Actually, can I have one of those?' I haven't smoked for quite a long time, so that's gone. But what I do have in its place is I have a pencil case, and it's got a little cartoon figure on it, and it says 'Poo,' and this person is squatting. That's my relaxation tool. Out comes the poo pencil case and everyone just goes [sigh]."

Bonus question

On the question of Hollywood's sexism problem

"I have such a hard time being asked that question. I don't think actors and actresses should ever complain and make noises. The truth is I've been extremely lucky and I can only speak for myself. I've never had any reason to complain. I've been in a position in my career where I've worked with wonderful people from whom I've learned extraordinary things. I'm continuing to work and continuing to do things that are challenging and artistically stimulating. That's all an actor can hope for. So I honestly try to shy away from that question, because I don't know how to answer it. I also think whatever I said in response to that type of question would get picked up on and quoted a million times over."

3 ways to fix 'New Girl'

Our two cents.
We love the sitcom, but with a few changes the show can come back stronger next year.

It goes without saying that we expect to see more "True American" next season, but we know they would never disappoint us on that count. / RAY MICKSHAW, FOX

We're officially into summer now, which means many shows are off for a few months. Instead of plowing through our Netflix binge-watch list, we'd like to brainstorm ways to shake up our favorite shows. Let's start with the Zooey Deschanel-led "New Girl." The show has taken some odd turns over the years, partly because it's locked into place by its premise: A kooky woman moves in with three dudes. Here are three ways the show can get its groove back.

1 Stop messing around with Schmidt
We have no interest in revisiting the Schmidt who dated two girls at once in Season 3, and we're a little anxious that he and Cece jumped straight from friends to engaged. Let's see the relationship actually work out for them.

2 No more Nick/Jess
Last season ended with hints that the central duo might reunite at some point, and while we enjoy Nick the romantic lead quite a bit, we don't need our hearts broken again. We're fine with the wistful nod to this couple having some feelings for each other, but let's leave it at that.

3 Change up the loft
We'd like to see Jess get her own place. She's a vice principal now! She should try living on her own. It would be a fun inversion of the premise, and we think she'd go nuts with FOMO about what was happening in the loft.

Why 'Paris Is Burning' is still vital

"Paris is Burning" director Jennie Livingston, some of the film's stars and members of the community will be at the screening. / MIRAMAX Anniversary. The doc about Harlem's drag-ball culture turns 25 this year.

Near the beginning of "Paris Is Burning" — the seminal 1990 documentary about the Harlem drag balls — a curly-haired, leather-clad Freddie Mercury look-alike talks about the appeal of these underground runway and dance-off competitions outside the legendary Elk's Lodge uptown. "Go in there and you feel 100 percent right being gay," he says. "That's not what it's like in the real world. It should be, but it's not."

The world may be a bit more inclusive now, with a U.S. president who supports same-sex marriage and transgendered heroines Caitlyn Jenner and Laverne Cox appearing on mainstream TV shows and magazine covers. But 25 years on, "Paris Is Burning" — newly restored with anniversary screenings happening throughout the country — remains as vital, as relevant, as tragic and heartbreaking yet sparkling and fabulous than ever.

That's partially because the gay minority scene it depicts has had an enormous impact on contemporary pop culture — from "voguing" (a series of dance movements inspired by high-fashion model poses, break-dancing and Egyptian hieroglyphics popularized by the Madonna song) to "RuPaul's Drag Race," even the term "throwing shade."

But it's also because its observations on gender identity and race and class still ring true today. Indeed, the film's runway competitions not only reward glamour and theatricality. They reward those who most convincingly embody any fantasy — whether that entails being a Hollywood starlet or passing as a straight Wall Street executive or Ivy League co-ed. (And the fact that many in the drag-ball community are poor, black or Latino — and gay or trans — means that the idea of going to school or getting a high-powered job is just as far-reaching as becoming Marilyn Monroe.)

Yet the film is also a testament to the power of community and alternative families and friendship — and the ways one can use dress, movement and even stereotypes as tools of empowerment. "In a ballroom, you can be anything you want," says one drag queen. "You can become anything or do anything." It is why the film has remained so beloved, and so powerful.

Getting inside Pete Docter's head

Sadness and Joy in Pete Docter's "Inside Out." / WALT DISNEY PICTURES

Interview. The "Inside Out" director tries to rescue Pixar's reputation.

It's fair to say that Pixar's Pete Docter takes the notion of Take Your Daughter to Work Day seriously. For his last film as a director, "Up," he let his daughter, Elie Docter, provide the voice of the younger version of the character Ellie. And his latest film, "Inside Out," was inspired by her adolescent mood swings. The good news is she's probably not reading this right now, according to her dad.

Has your daughter gotten fed up with you using her for story material yet?

You know, it's funny. We're not a real media-heavy family, so I'm not sure she's aware of how much I reference her — either at work or talking about her in the press. That's probably a good thing.

There have been some criticisms that for the last few films, Pixar hasn't really been living up to the high bar it set for itself. Have you felt pressure to make this a kind of return to form?

Obviously we set out to make every film as good as it possibly can be. There was a little more pressure in the last year when they moved "The Good Dinosaur," which was going to be last year, and then there was nothing from the studio and everything turned to us. Like the Eye of Sauron.

DOCTER
GETTY IMAGES

The fun part

These Pixar films take a while to make. What is it like on the campus when one of the projects that's further along is having its moment?

When you're still on the bench and you see the guy up at bat, you're kind of a little jealous. Because that's the fun part, when you're through all the struggle and the trials and the tribulations of the story — out of the five years, I've lost more hair over that because the story is always the hard part.

In the kitchen.
How do chefs really feel about diners ordering off menu?

Hold the gluten, please

Don't worry if you can't eat Opa's spanakopita — the restaurant has plenty of gluten-free options. / PROVIDED

Nowadays, planning for at least one gluten-free, lactose-intolerant, nut-allergic, shellfish-avoiding, garlic-shunning, vegan diner at every table is par for the course if you're a chef.

For gluten-free alone, the National Foundation for Celiac Awareness estimates one in 133 Americans have the disease, which requires a completely gluten-free diet — but that's likely only a small percentage of the population who have the disease but are undiagnosed or who are avoiding gluten for other sensitivity (or trendy) reasons.

A Vegetarian Resource Group survey released last month found that about 8 million adults in the U.S. are vegetarian, and around 1 million of those are vegan.

But if chefs see accommodating an ever-expanding list of food restrictions as a pain instead of a welcome challenge, most of them aren't admitting it.

"Today you really do have to think about that. It's about being hospitable to all of our diners," says Bobby Saritsoglou, formerly of Santucci's in South Philadelphia and now running the kitchen at Opa. He's the first Greek chef at the Greek small plates restaurant in Midtown Village.

Saritsoglou has cooked "every cuisine" in his career, but says "Greek influences everything" — which might make it easier for him to whip up dishes like a gluten-free platter.

"In Greek cooking, in healthy Mediterranean cooking, there are a lot of vegetable options. It's just how we eat. So maybe it's a little easier for us," the chef says.

It might get a little more complicated when serving up other cuisines — but not for an "Iron Chef America" competitor like Jeff Haskell, executive chef at Good Company Hospitality overseeing Parker & Quinn, Refinery Rooftop and Winnie's Jazz Bar in New York.

"Over the last three years, it's become an expectation, both on the restaurant's part and on the guest's part, to have that flexibility. We have a lot of items on the menu that are either gluten-free or can easily be modified. It's usually a simple deletion, like taking away the croutons," says Haskell, who does come close to hinting at the occasional frustration in modifying the menu — but only barely.

"Of course, it presents certain challenges here and there," he says. "But we're here to serve our guests. If what they're requesting is within reason and within our capabilities to deliver with the level of quality that we're known for, then there really is no problem."

Both chefs say servers at their restaurants are trained to graciously and knowledgeably guide guests with dietary restrictions. "We want all diners to feel welcome and comfortable, and our servers are very studied," Saritsoglou says. "Hospitality is so important. We don't want any diner to feel like an outsider."

Jeff Haskell is executive chef at Good Company Hospitality's restaurants. / COURTESY OF REFINERY HOTEL

Prep line

Should you call ahead?

If you're walking into a restaurant with a long list of dietary restrictions — such as veganism, which cuts out meat, poultry, seafood, eggs, dairy and honey — it might be a good idea to give a little warning.

"If someone who's a vegan calls ahead, we like to arrange a specific special dish for them," Chef Haskell says.

"We might do a pasta, or we have a farro risotto, or a composed vegetable plate. But really it could go either way. We're also ready to accommodate on the fly."

Bobby Saritsoglou, and his mustache, run the kitchen at Opa. PROVIDED

Brush up on your trivia

"Stuff You Should Know" hosts Josh Clark, left, and Chuck Bryant perform at the Trocadero (1003 Arch St., TheTroc.com) tonight at 8 p.m. Tickets are $25. / PROVIDED

Pop culture. "Stuff You Should Know," one of the first popular podcasts, brings a live version to the Troc.

Street gangs. Tupperware. Internet censorship. Pinewood derbies. Male puberty. Water slides. Clowns. Those are some of the topics that Chuck Bryant and Josh Clark have tackled on the "Stuff You Should Know" podcast in the last couple of months — and they've been at it, twice weekly, since 2008. Listening to the show is something like hanging out at a neighborhood bar where a "Jeopardy!" champion occupies the last stool.

Clark and Bryant share an amiable chemistry, a penchant for rambling pop culture digressions, and a seemingly inexhaustible curiosity. They'll be bringing all of that to the Troc tonight, as they perform a live version of the podcast and take questions from the audience. The hosts are remaining tight-lipped about the subject they'll tackle, but welcome any chance to interact with their dedicated fanbase. "The two of us are usually stuck in that studio," Bryant says, "so it's great to be able to get face to face with people."

Bryant and Clark were hired within a few months of one another as writers for the website HowStuffWorks, and about a year later Clark was tapped to host an experiment in the relatively new medium of podcasting. Several hosts were tried in the early days until Bryant appeared and the pairing stuck. "We just clicked because we were already work buddies," Bryant recalls. "Nothing you hear is scripted. We just sit down and have a conversation as naturally as we can and I think that's been the secret sauce."

While the show at its best is fun and informative, the hosts have been surprised to hear from fans say the show helped them through difficult periods in their own lives — shows on death, dying and grief in particular. "We feel like when we can entertain and educate, that's a great show," Bryant says. "When we can do that and also help someone in some way, that's the cherry on top."

Rock stars

Spin-offs

The show has since spun off into Clark's Web video series "Don't Be Dumb," a website of their own and a short-lived scripted series for the Science Channel in 2013. A book is in the works, and their current East Coast run is one of four short tours the duo is undertaking this year. Bryant says that he was nervous in their initial live appearances (usually at Comic Cons or science fairs), but has grown to feel comfortable in front of crowds.

"I remember being scared out of our minds in front of maybe a hundred people, and now we're getting up in front of a thousand people and really enjoying it," he says. "The adrenaline rush is real. I can't imagine what real rock stars feel like, because we feel like rock stars just being a couple of nerds up on stage talking about stuff."

Decorate with flowers

home

Love where you live

It's all in the details

One way to fool guests into thinking they're dining at a five-star restaurant: Ditch the parsley and use edible flowers as garnish, or use them to dress up a summer beverage.

"You can grow edible summer flowers in your garden, or those without the yard space or green thumb can purchase edible flowers at places like ShopTerrain.com," Tierney says.

Easy floral arrangements for your warm weather bash.

RACHEL KASHDAN
@ MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

Summer is all about fun and ease — and that includes the decor for your next party. And what simpler way to decorate than with materials straight from nature? We're talking bright, pretty, seasonal flowers.

Following in the footsteps of the farm-to-table movement, Great Performances — a catering and events company that sources its produce from its farm in upstate New York — is all about using local flowers to create beautiful arrangements, something they've dubbed "farm-to-vase."

"Just as eating farm-to-table has been sort of a macro-trend over the past decade, we're finally seeing that transfer over to flowers, too," says Josh Tierney, the entertaining and decor expert at Great Performances.

Not only is using local flowers more sustainable and community minded, he says, but it's also cheaper than buying flowers imported from Europe or South America.

Tierney shows us a few simple ways to incorporate farmer's market blooms into our next summer soiree.

Potted herbs

Add wholesome charm and avoid the "What do I do with these?" centerpiece dilemma by displaying potted herbs. Bonus: Guests will be glad to take them home as party favors.

"It's this idea of recycling the decor — having something that lives on that you can use to cook with," says Tierney, who suggests potting clusters of rosemary, basil, thyme and oregano.

These can also be styled to fit any event whether rustic or modern. "You can do them in recycled cans like we've done, in terracotta pots or in all sorts of funky flea market vessels," he says.

Teacups make adorable vases

Whether you've had grandma's heirloom china stored away in a cupboard or you've amassed your own mismatched collection from flea market hunts, just clip some roses or peonies to add instant elegance to your summer soiree.

Worried that it might look like your 3-year-old nephew just slipped some flowers into a party-goer's teacup? The trick is to make these arrangements look purposeful, explains Tierney.

Here's how: Take some clear Scotch tape and make a grid across the teacup. Fill the cup with water, and then place the stems into that grid. "That gives you a bit of control when you're composing the arrangements," he says.

Teacup flowers work really well as a centerpiece for a food platter or, as Tierney suggests, placed down the center of a long table at a wedding, a brunch or, fittingly, a tea party.

What will your budget get you?

Renters pay premium for the convenience of Center City, where shops and restaurants are right outside your door. R. KENNEDY FOR VISIT PHILADELPHIA

We talked to realtors in three different neighborhoods to find out what $1,300 will rent.

MADELINE PRESLAND
@ MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

When it comes to relocating in Philly, settling into a different neighborhood can feel like moving to a different city entirely. Depending on location, starting your apartment search with a budget of $1,300 a month could mean you're looking at a tiny studio or a roomy two-bedroom.

Fishtown

Fixed-gear bikes, bars pouring craft beer and small-batch coffee roasters are three things you'll find in this neighborhood. Realtor Chris Somers of Re/Max Access works extensively in the area.

Center City

Gary Pett of Berkshire Hathaway Home Services echoes the sentiment of all realtors: "location, location, location."

"Commute is one of the top indicators of how happy people are, so if you can shorten your commute to a five-minute walk, I think you're better off," says Pett of Center City convenience.

The median rental price for a one-bedroom in Center City is $1,400, Pett says, but there are less expensive options available (and significantly more expensive ones, too). He suggests the Adelphia House at 1229 Chesnut St. and the nearby Arts Condo at 1324 Locust, both older, refurbished buildings broken up into small units. An online search shows apartments in the Arts Condo renting from $800 to $1,200 for 300 to 400 square feet.

"For $1,300, that's going to be a smaller two-bedroom property, maybe 800 to 1,000 square feet," Somers says of renting in Fishtown. "It might be in Fishtown central, or closer to Olde Richmond."

Somers notes that Fishtown is great for its lifestyle — bars, cafes, galleries — and its walkability. But that does come with a rising price tag: "Rents continue to go higher because there's not a lot of inventory and the demand is so high."

South of South

If you decide to head south of South Street, to Graduate Hospital, Point Breeze or Newbold, you might get more bang for your buck. Apartments or even rowhomes at around $1,300 a month usually range between 840 and 1,100 square feet, says Maria Tropea of Spectrum Realty, a South Philly-focused company her father started in the 1970s.

"You're getting all the Center City people to move [south of South] — the young couples, the hipsters like you see in Passyunk Square," Tropea says. "[Passyunk Square] is overcrowded now, so they go to Newbold and Point Breeze."

A new sight on Point Breeze Avenue points to more changes coming to the neighborhood: Indego bikes.

"They even put the bicycles there, the ones they have in Center City!" Tropea says. "That's saying something: It's up and coming."

Realtor Maria Tropea sees the arrival of Indego bike share in Point Breeze as a sign of change for the neighborhood. M. FISCHETTI FOR VISIT PHILADELPHIA

Letter to the editor

Consign the Confederate flag to a museum

I struggle with how it is permissible, or legal, to have the symbol of the Confederacy flying on a public building. Beyond the painful racial implications, this flag is a symbol of a challenge made to the sovereignty of the United States.

First, a civil war was fought and the Confederate states lost. No former adversary should be permitted to have their flag raised on public property. Would we accept the former Nazi flag, the swastika, or even the ISIS flag to be prominently displayed in this manner? This flag has always been a symbol of racial division. If for no other reason, common sense and decency should prevail.

Second, to have this flag flying higher than the U.S. flag is insulting, especially to all the men and women who have served in our military.

For 150 years the U.S. Congress has skirted the issue and abandoned its responsibility, [and instead has] tolerated this behavior by South Carolina and other states. Congress must take action and ban this type of display within any state.

Examine the response of the candidates running for the presidency. We should not support any of the candidates who struggle with giving us a straight answer on why this flag should not be banned [on public properties] and relegated to museums.

GREGORY HARVEY, VIA EMAIL

Weekend's answer

Sea Lemon's top 3 DIYs for the summer

1. DIY travel wallet

A travel wallet is a great way to keep all those important things (ID, passport, boarding passes) in one place, so you can easily have them on hand. For the summer travelers out there, this is a supereasy and inexpensive wallet you can make at home before your trip. You can make it out of vinyl, leather, fabric or craft foam (only $1 for a large sheet).

Just fold your material in a gatefold and divide the folded flaps into pockets. Add an elastic band around the wallet to keep it closed. For an easy-to-follow template, check out my tutorial.

2. DIY T-shirt cutting

Make your summer a little less sweaty by turning old or baggy T-shirts into racerbacks and sleeveless tank tops. This will cost you nothing if you already have old tees to cut up, or try thrift stores for a unique variety of tees for less than $5.

To make a racerback, first cut off the sleeves. Then on the back of the shirt, cut out a deep "V" shape from the collar to the middle of the shirt. You should now have something that looks like two straps on the back.

To finish, tie those two straps together by wrapping the remaining shirt scraps around them in knots, or weave through them for a braided look. You can also use ribbon or shoe laces to tie them together. Watch my tutorial for examples.

3. DIY slime

Yes, that's right — slime! It's gooey-gross fun, a great sensory activity for kids and easy to make with just a few household supplies. Here's how to make it:

In a bowl, combine a 4 oz. bottle of Elmer's glue (clear or white) and 1/2 cup of liquid starch (Sta-Flo). Stir together, then add a 1/4 cup of water. Knead the slimey goo together until it's no longer sticky and you have slime to play with! If you don't have liquid starch, you can try a Borax recipe. For even more fun, try adding things to the slime, like glitter, toy critters, wiggly eyes, food color or nontoxic glow in the dark paint! Take a look at my tutorial for some fun options.

Thanks to huge strides in cancer research, 14,500,000 people diagnosed with cancer have overcome the disease. Why can't everyone say the same?

Only the American Association for Cancer Research brings together more than 35,000 of the world's top researchers, health care professionals and advocates to untangle cancer's complexities.

By deciphering the WHY of cancer, AACR researchers are accelerating the development of new treatments for every cancer. Help us uncover the clues to tomorrow's cures, so millions more can live cancer-free.

Hamels on the move?

Hamels to Rangers in works

According to Jon Morosi of Fox Sports, the Rangers and Phillies are "having ongoing dialogue about Hamels" and the longtime Phillies ace will apparently allow a trade to Texas. Hamels is 5-5 with a 2.96 ERA and 103 strikeouts in 94 1/3 innings.

Is Phillies' Franco among baseball's best rookies?

MLB. Maikel Franco looks to have a future as an All-Star, and possibly a superstar.

For the past 13 years, since the departure of Scott Rolen, the position of third base for the Phillies was utilized year after year with an assortment of different players, mainly with defensive focus. What the position lacked was a young, high-average and power-hitter.

Since May 15, that void seems to be filled with the emerging Maikel Franco.

A true candidate for Rookie of the Year, Franco looks to become the fifth Phillie to win the award. Rolen accomplished the feat in 1996, a player who led the third basemen for the next eight years.

The 22-year-old Franco is the bright spot on a dreary, incompetent and sometimes ignominious Phillies team that owns baseball's worst record (25-47 as of Tuesday afternoon).

Since being called up to the Phils in May, Franco is batting .312 with nine home runs and 24 RBIs. The bulk of these numbers are from a red-hot June highlighted by Franco's Monday night debut at Yankee Stadium which consisted of four hits, two of which were bombs over the left field fence. He also tallied five RBIs.

Franco's play is convincing the organization and fanbase that he may be the real deal, and he is beginning to emerge as the team's top position player.

The offensive numbers speak for themselves, but Franco also has been exploiting his stellar defense at the hot corner. To go along with his juggernaut hitting Monday night, a diving stop ending with a strong lengthy throw to first base added to his best Major League game thus far. The possibility of Franco representing the Phillies at the All-Star game looms as well, especially if Cole Hamels and Jonathan Papelbon are shipped off before the midsummer classic.

Franco could wind up as the Phillies' lone All-Star this July. / GETTY IMAGES

Rookie of the Year

Here is Franco's competition to be the NL's top rookie:

- Kris Bryant, Cubs, 3B: .282 BA, 10 HR, 42 RBI
- Joc Pederson, LA Dodgers, CF: 40 runs scored, 19 HR, 36 RBI

Are the inconsistent Union really as bad as their record?

MLS. The Union have the most losses in all of Major League Soccer.

The Union's 2015 campaign can be described as tumultuous so far, to say the least. After a recent resurgence of three wins through late May into early June, the Union (4-10-3) have had quite a collapse in their two matches since, emphasized by a 5-1 drubbing by the L.A. Galaxy (6-5-7) on Saturday.

With 15 points, the Union are just one point out of last place in the league; their 10 losses for the season leads the MLS. If things don't turn around, their season could slip away at the blink of an eye.

"[It was a] wake-up call," said Union midfielder Brian Carroll after Saturday's loss. "The good thing is we have a quick turnaround and we get to play Seattle on Wednesday at home. We have to take what we can from this game, and improve and look deep, [and then] put on a much better result."

The Seattle Sounders (9-5-2) hold the second-most points (29) in the league this season. They're one of three teams with nine wins on the year. The Union will catch a slight break, as the Sounders are down their superstar, Clint Dempsey, who was suspended three matches for tearing apart a referee's notebook in the team's most recent U.S. Open Cup match. But don't expect this to slow the Sounders much, as they're tied for the league lead in goals scored with 23.

"It's a game in which both teams are coming off a lot of games in a few days," Union forward C.J. Sapong said. "It's gonna be a grind. You can pay attention to tactics and players as much as you want, but at this point of the season it's really about heart and the mentality that you're bringing on game day."

The last time the Union faced the Sounders was in the U.S. Open Cup final at home last season, falling 3-1 in overtime on the big stage. Union manager Jim Curtin thinks it's something that will be on everyone's mind Wednesday night at PPL Park.

"You know who beat you in the final, there's no doubt about that," Curtin said. "It was a good game, but one that left an empty feeling for us. When you see those green jerseys on the field tomorrow, that will probably be the first thing that goes through everyone's mind — they have a trophy of ours. That should motivate guys for sure."

Quoted

"I like providing an impact for my team because that brings me extra energy. Right now I feel really good."

C.J. Sapong, who has logged 180 minutes in the last two games for the Union.

5 top targets for Flyers' No. 7 pick in NHL Draft

NHL. The Flyers are under a lot of pressure to make the right choices in a very important draft this weekend.

We know Connor McDavid and Jack Eichel will get taken with the first and second picks, respectively, at the NHL Draft, which is this weekend. We probably even know who are the No. 3 and 4 picks. From there, though, it's a total crapshoot. It will leave the Flyers, who own the No. 7 selection, with a bevy of players to choose from in what is being hailed as one of the best drafts in a decade. Here are the top five names GM Ron Hextall is likely considering:

ERIC GOLDSTEIN
@EricEsponda
sports@metro.us

1 Ivan Provorov

Height/Weight: 6-0/200

Age: 18

Position: Defense

2014 stats/league: 15 goals, 46 assists, 60 games/Western Hockey League

NHL player he compares himself to: Former NHL all-star Nicklas Lidstrom

Scouting report: Strong, savvy and quick with the puck, Provorov is a two-way blueliner who has first-pairing potential and is widely considered the most NHL-ready defenseman in the draft.

Will he be a Flyer?: If he is still on the board at No. 7, absolutely. Even though the organization is stocked with a gluttony of defensive prospects, his talent and potential is too hard to ignore, and he is probably Hextall's top choice. The big question is, will he still be there when the Flyers pick?

Provorov likely is at the top of the Flyers' draft board. / ALL PHOTOS GETTY

2 Mathew Barzal

Height/Weight: 5-11/175

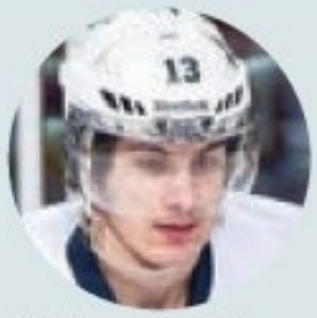
Age: 18

Position: Center

2014 stats/league: 12 goals, 45 assists, 44 games/WHL

NHL comparison: Claude Giroux

Scouting report: Highly gifted but his stock took a hit after he had a serious knee injury last season.



Will he be a Flyer?: The Flyers must love his playmaking skills and they could steal a player who was projected in the top five before his injury. But a few other players would probably have to be taken for the Flyers to select Barzal.

3 Mikko Rantanen

Height/weight: 6-3/211

Age: 18

Position: Right wing

2014 stats/league: 9 goals, 19 assists, 56 games/Liiga (Finland)

NHL comparison: Jakub Voracek

Scouting report: Combined size and strength with elite skating ability

– he was the top-ranked European skater by NHL Central Scouting – he might be the best winger in the draft. He played in an elite league against older players.

Will he be a Flyer?: If Provorov is taken, he's their next guy.

4 Zach Werenski

Scouting report: The University of Michigan player is an offensive-minded defenseman who can push the puck, pass it and quarterback the power play.

Will he be a Flyer?: Don't be surprised to hear his name called by the commissioner, especially if Provorov is gone. He has all the tools to be an elite defenseman.

5 Lawson Crouse

Scouting report: A physical player who uses his size well, Crouse is drawing a lot of attention.

Will he be a Flyer?: Although the team has a glaring hole and lack of depth at left wing and he would instantly fill a need, Crouse is ranked in the 10-15 range — and below Rantanen — in many mock drafts.
